Geowoodstock Zine

This is how the pages of this Zine are laid out (and the same way up as the numbers shown):

To Fold:

Then crease the sheet along the two main directions (by folding it in half then opening it, once for each direction):

Now make another pair of creases, with the effect of dividing the long direction into quarters.

Then unfold again, fold in half, and make a cut with scissors as shown - you should be cutting through two thicknesses of paper, but only as far as those quarter-folds you just made.

Open it out again. The resulting page should have a cut in its centre.

Fold it in half along the long direction, such that all your pages are still on the outside.

Now push it inwards from each end, so that the inner bit pushes out in both directions to make a kind of cross-shape. Fold the resulting pages together so that your front page is outmost.

And there you have it, a little zine of 8 pages that needs no stapling or gluing.
